The Covid-19 pandemic paralysed the entire overseas education system. Neither global leaders nor notable medical specialists could have imagined the disastrous repercussions of the pandemic on every aspect of contemporary society. Post-pandemic, the education industry has resurged, and is once again witnessing numerous students going overseas to pursue higher education.

HUGE SPIKE IN THE NUMBER OF STUDENTS

A remarkable rise in international students is being observed in almost all the top countries, despite pandemic restrictions. As per the Bureau of Immigration (BOI), the number of Indian students who shifted to countries like the US, Canada, UK, etc. for their higher education are given below.

- 2020 - 2,59,655
- 2021 - 4,44,553

Looking at the statistics, it is clear that even after the pervasive impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, the demand for overseas education has not been impacted. The US Mission in India reported that it had issued a record-breaking 82,000 student visas to date in 2022. The British High Commission stated that UK has issued 117,965 study visas this year. Similarly, countries like Canada and Australia have also been inviting students in larger numbers in 2022.

Industry experts predict an upsurge in overseas education applications in the coming years as well. 2023 and 2024 could be a good period to plan higher education abroad, because, by then, the 2022 recession is expected to end and all markets should revert to normal. What better time to study abroad than now?

Quick Bite: Forecast projects 1.8 million Indian students abroad by 2024.
