The UK is known for offering world-class academic experience to international students. Home to institutions that consistently rank among the best in the world, the country attracts scores of applicants who enroll in a variety of programmes. The UK was one of the very few countries that had kept its borders open for international students even during the pandemic. Since the introduction of the Graduate Immigration Route (GIR) in September 2019 - which is basically an open work permit that allows both bachelor's and master's students to pursue career opportunities post completion of their studies - the UK became a coveted study destination. The numbers tell the story. From 20,000 students in 2018 to 50,000 plus in 2021, the country has witnessed a huge spike in enrollments.
